Your Guide to Personalized Obituaries

A personalized obituary offers you the opportunity to memorialize your loved one in your own words. Through a personalized obituary, you can share thoughts about your loved one by writing about the personality, the relationships, the accomplishments, the interests, the associations that made up the tapestry of his or her life.

This booklet explains the options for obituaries in The News-Gazette and gives you a checklist and suggestions for writing personalized obituaries. Your funeral director also may be able to offer you advice.

The guide also explains our policies for handling these memorials and our rates.

Obituary Policy

The News-Gazette accepts death notices and obituaries from funeral homes, cremation societies or comparable entities that are in charge of arrangements. We do not accept obituary information directly from family members except when no funeral professionals are involved. In such circumstances, we must confirm the death through an independent source such as a coroner, police or minister.

To Ensure Accuracy

Please confirm the spellings of all names and accuracy of dates. If possible, show the written obituary to other family members to get their comments and suggestions. Family members and friends may be able to provide memories to include in the obituary.

You are creating a historical record. Years from now, others will read this obituary to learn more about their family or to do genealogical research. Accuracy in all details is extremely important.

Types of Obituaries We Publish

1) Death Notice

We will publish a free death notice if services have not yet been arranged. A death notice is a single paragraph that includes name, age, town and funeral home in charge of services.

Michael Simsam

URBANA — Michael A. Simsam, 76, of Urbana died Friday (Nov. 17, 2006) in Peoria. Funeral arrangements were incomplete at Renner-Wikoff Chapel, 1900 Philo Road, U.

A death notice:

- Is free.
- Gets the news in the paper, giving the family time to make funeral arrangements.

Types of Obituaries We Publish

2) Basic Obituary

We will publish for free a brief obituary for anyone who has lived in our circulation area. This option is limited to two paragraphs. The first paragraph will include a dateline, name, age, time, day and date of death and place of death.

The second paragraph will include the time and place of services and visitation and the place of burial. The name of the funeral home handling arrangements also will be included if the services are elsewhere.

Our circulation area includes the following counties: Champaign, Vermilion, Piatt, Ford, Douglas, and portions of Macon, McLean, Iroquois, Coles, Edgar and Moultrie.

Bernice Prammery

PAXTON — Bernice V. Prammery, 55, of Paxton died at 7:30 p.m. Monday (Oct. 30, 2006) at Provena Covenant Medical Center, Urbana.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday at First United Methodist Church, 210 W. Church St., C. The Rev. Terry Harter will officiate. Burial will be in Villa Grove Cemetery, Villa Grove. Visitation will be from 5 to 8 p.m. Tuesday at Knapp-Miller Funeral Home, 142 W. Patton St., Paxton.

A basic obituary:

- Is free.
- Is limited to two paragraphs.
- Does not include survivors or any personal information.

A dateline is the uppercase town or city that begins the first paragraph of a newspaper story. In the example above, PAXTON is the dateline.

When choosing a dateline, use the local hometown. If the person no longer lived in East Central Illinois, consider using the local town the person used to live in.

Types of Obituaries We Publish

3) Personalized Obituary

You may also submit a personalized obituary, through a funeral home, and express in your own words who your loved one was. Such an obituary could focus solely on biographical information. Or it could express your loved one's devotion to faith or emphasize a sense of humor.

The cost is 6 cents per character — about $11 a column inch. We also will accept photos; please see page 9 about photo guidelines. A photo is an additional $10.

We will include a black-and-white American flag at no charge for veterans of the U.S. armed forces.

All obituaries published in The News-Gazette also will be displayed on our website, www.news-gazette.com. For personalized obituaries, a guest book will be added on our website where friends and families can express condolences.

Personalized obituary:

- Is paid for through the funeral home
- Says what you want.
- Will undergo light editing.

Harv Temmons

RANTOUL — Harvin Temmons, 70, of Rantoul died Sunday (Dec. 10, 2006) at home.

Adding special touches

Here are samples of the type of expressions that you might include in a personalized obituary.

She was a devoted wife and mother. Her laughter and joyful spirit will be missed. You were more than my wife: You were my best friend.

He loved gardening, furniture refinishing and fishing. Although the quiet hero is gone, the legacy he left will live forever in the hearts of those he touched.

Because she loved to help people, Bess chose to be an organ donor.

No one liked a good joke better than he did and he told them often. He even liked the bad ones and told them often, also.

She graciously accepted the fact that her only grandchildren would have four legs, a tail and a bark.

He always said he could weld anything but a broken heart or the crack of dawn.

Faith, cause of death and nontraditional survivors are examples of what can be included in a personalized obituary.

Submitting obituaries

Local funeral homes: Local funeral homes have a sign-on to our secure website. If a funeral home in East Central Illinois does not have a sign-on, the funeral director should contact our managing editor, Dan Corkery, at 217-351-5218.

If a technical problem prevents a funeral home from reaching our website, please call 217-351-5220 or 217-351-5211.

Out-of-town funeral homes: Please call 217-351-5220 Monday-Friday before 3 p.m. Central time zone. One of our newsroom employees will assist you. On weekends and holidays, please call 217-351-5211.

Editing obituaries

Our goal is to honor each family's wishes. However, The News-Gazette retains the responsibility for editing all obituaries. We will not ordinarily change the wording of a personalized obituary, but we will edit for accuracy, spelling, common newspaper style and unacceptable language.

We will notify the funeral home as soon as possible if there is problem with an obituary.

If there is a factual error that the newspaper created, we will rerun the corrected obituary at no charge. (Please note: The editing described above does not itself constitute an error and will not result in a rerun.) If the error is the responsibility of the family or the funeral home, standard rates will apply for a rerun.

Write Your Own Obituary

Who knows your life better than you? If you do write your own obituary, please consider:

- Writing it in electronic form, such as a Microsoft Word file or in an e-mail. That will make it easier for the funeral home to transmit it to us. Retyping your obituary could introduce misspellings or errors.
- Telling your family or loved ones where the obituary is.
- Discussing the obituary with a funeral director, especially if you are pre-arranging services.
